The Standard for Quality, Innovation, Service and Support Since 1955

IPD GASKETS

IPD GASKET MATERIALS AND TECHNOLOGY

The quality of our materials at IPD defines our gasket program. Many aftermarket gasket manufacturers compromised the quality of their gaskets by using materials not intended to work under the extreme conditions that most diesel and natural gas engines are subject to. These lighter duty materials will lead to reduced sealing capability or in more extreme cases, lower engine performance and engine life.

IPD use the latest materials and verify through our rigorous QC process that each part number receives the correct material specification for the application. Critical tests and measurements are applied to all of our gasket materials to assure that there are not performance issues within our program. Some of these include:

Creep Relaxation

This indicates the ability of the material to retain its original bolt torque specification after exposure to stress.

Crush Resistance Density

Crushing or extrusion can occur when compressive forces exceed the point where the gasket materials pore volume is zero, resulting in leakage.

Tensile Strength

This is a measurement of the materials resistance to blow out when used in high pressure or high torque applications.

IPD GASKETS

IPD GASKET PROGRAM

We realize that demands can differ between markets or applications so we offer two distinct gasket systems:

Modular Original Style Multiple Sets

These sets are based on the same multiple groups that you might be accustomed to from the OEM. They are specific to an engine arrangement or a close grouping of arrangements and serial numbers. Many times when ordering the Modular Original style multiple sets, you must order multiple part numbers (possibly up to 8 or 9 or more sets) to rebuild your engine as they can lack the items that are commonly replaced or needed to reinstall a component. IPD offers a unique and custom gasket set to alleviate these issues.

IPDStyle 1-2-3™ Consolidated Sets

For years IPD customers complained of the difficulty of ordering, shipping and inventorying the original style multiple sets. In the late 1980's IPD developed and customized our special sets to:

- Reduce IPD distributor's and rebuilder's inventory by consolidating a wider range of serial and arrangements than was possible with the original style multiple sets.
- Reduce the time to order and stock many different multiple style sets in order to cover a wider range of equipment and engines.
- Packaging IPDStyle 123™ with individual groupings based on the engine component or the location of the gaskets on the engines in easy to identify bags.
- Marking all gaskets and orings clearly with the part numbers for easy identification reducing engine technician's time to find the proper part.
- IPDStyle 123™ sets are designed from ground up with help from our customers that rebuild these engines. Do not confuse these with other companies that simply put all the multiple sets into one box and call it consolidated, still lacking critical items or duplicating pieces.
